Blown Up, Accuses 5 Men

Warrants were issued in Morristown, N.J., yesterday, for the arrest of five men accused by George Ellicks, a farmer of Striving, of trying to blow him up with dynamite. The explosion occurred at a good part of the side of a house in which was Ellicks's room, and he was killed.

The wind that whistled through the shattered clapboards near his bed, and his housekeeper, a Miss Cameron, a serving girl, and his sister's home, was still awake when five mounted men rode up to the house. They tried to get out of that part of the country and stay away, he said, or his house really would be blown up. He said that he recognized the men without difficulty.

Woman Pays Fine of $5 For Slapping Patrolman

After she had apologized, Mrs. Anna E. Chapman, of 25 Maple Avenue, Larchmont, was fined $5 by Magistrate Marsh in the women's night court last night for slapping the face of Patrolman McAuliffe of the West 125th Street station last Saturday.

The policeman had remonstrated with her for leaving her automobile at 136th Street and Broadway, where it interfered with traffic for an hour, while she and her husband and friend were in a restaurant.

Cederstrom Hides Identity of Informant

Won't Name Man Who Said Riverside Report Would Be Suppressed

Expert Examined by Public Service Board

Services Sought by Hearst Interests, Commissioner Harkness Testifies

Responsibility for the attempt which Sigfried Cederstrom says was made to gag him in connection with his report to the Public Service Commission on an unnamed individual when he appeared as his own witness before the commission yesterday.

When members of the commission demanded that he back up the charges made in his letter of resignation as real estate expert for that body last Saturday he told of the statement of this person, whose identity he carefully guarded, that his preliminary report was to be locked up and suppressed.

Although Cederstrom did not back up his charges with additional information, he admitted that he might have been hasty in resigning in the spectacular manner he did—the commissioners did not carry out their threat or the recommendation of LeRoy T. Harkness, chief of rapid transit, that the resignation be ignored and the expert dismissed from the commission's service.

Cederstrom surprised members of the commission when, after saying that he didn't know whether he would appear for yesterday's trial, he strolled into the room of that body, at 129 Broadway, early in the morning, accompanied by Meier Steinbrink, who acted as his attorney.

Reasons for Resigning

The real estate man was closely questioned by Commissioner William Hayward concerning his reasons for resigning without consulting any member of the commission. His chief reply was that he never had gone over the head of his superior and didn't care to do so in this case.

Commissioner Hayward then called attention to the fact that his orders to make the appraisals in connection with the proposed West Side improvement were in the subject of dispute—came directly from Chairman Oscar S. Straus and members of the commission, and that, as a consequence, there would have been no going over the heads of superiors in consulting with them.

And having received your instructions from the commission, you resigned without communicating or speaking to any one of the commissioners about these facts set up in your resignation. Isn't that true?" demanded Commissioner Hayward.

Cederstrom replied that this was only partly true, that the written instructions to make the New York Central appraisals came from Harkness, bore his initials and carried every indication of being his orders.

Another matter that Cederstrom revealed for the first time, was indicating that he had reasons to believe he was not being given liberty of action, was that he had been ordered not to cooperate with the committee of the Real Estate Board, which is making a voluntary appraisal of the land involved in the New York Central improvement for the city.

In response to a letter from that committee he said that Harkness had said: "You are not to give your opinion to others."

"It seemed to me that if I was a member of the New York Real Estate Board, and it appointed a committee for this purpose, if I couldn't get the benefit of its technical knowledge, it was about time to quit," said Cederstrom.

Hides Name of Informant

When Cederstrom announced that he had been told the preliminary report in which he argued against the present methods of real estate valuations included in the proposed New York Central contract was to be locked up and suppressed, Commissioner Harkness immediately demanded to know who his informant was.

"I don't care to say," was the answer. The question was repeated in several forms and words, but no further information on the subject was obtained. Mr. Harkness injected a new issue into the discussion in a report to the commission in which he told of a telephone conversation with William A. De Ford, counsel for the Randolph Realty Company and Hearst interests that are opposing the New York Central agreement, in connection with Cederstrom's services.

He declared that De Ford had asked that Cederstrom be permitted to make an appraisal for the Randolph concern to be used in connection with the injunction proceedings now pending before Justice Crockett. It was said that in this case as in others, no subordinate of that body should be permitted to work for outside interests except public bodies.

In a conversation with Cederstrom later Mr. Harkness said that the real estate expert had said that his fee for the report which he had not been permitted to make for De Ford probably would be $10,000. Harkness said that he thought that this fact ought to be considered in connection with the reasons for Cederstrom's resignation.

Place Resignation on File

The commission's discussion of Cederstrom's unexpected resignation and the accompanying charge that he had been gagged finally resulted in an adjournment after a decision to place his resignation on file, thus eliminating the possibility of dismissing him from the service.

This latest complication in connection with the West Side improvement again called forth predictions of those opposed to the plan that the contract, now drawn, never could be passed by the Board of Estimate. Just at present there is no possibility of a vote upon the measure because of the fact that the Board of Estimate is in recess and that it is in the hands of the Port and Terminal Commission for reconsideration as well as the temporary restraining order under which no further official action may be taken.

The attitude of members of the Board of Estimate, who the votes they may cast in the deliberations of that body, is believed to be as follows: For the proposed agreement—Mayor Mitchell; 3; Controller Prendergast; 3; Borough President Pounds, of Brooklyn; 2; total, 8 votes.

Against proposed agreement—F. L. Dowling, chairman Board of Aldermen; 3; Borough President Marks, Manhattan; 2; Borough President Connolly, Queens; 1; Borough President Van Name, Richmond; 1; total, 7 votes.

The attitude of Borough President Mathewson of the Bronx, still is in doubt. His one vote would result in the adoption of the contract or its defeat by a tie vote of 8 to 8. It was admitted yesterday, however, that the changes the Port and Terminal Committee now is considering, might change the attitude of some members of the Board of Estimate in its favor.

Move to Vacate Cropper Order

During the day Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy made application in the Appellate Division for an order to show cause in connection with the writ of prohibition called for against Justice Cropper, of the Supreme Court in Kings County, as a step to prevent the examination of Mayor Mitchell and city officials in connection with the West Side improvement, next Saturday morning.

The order involves a technical move which is construed as an application for the vacating of the order of Judge Cropper, under which the city officials otherwise must appear next Saturday morning for examination.

William F. Morgan, president of the Merchants' Association, filed a statement with the Board of Estimate yesterday afternoon, in which the attitude of the organization in favor of the relocation of the New York Central tracks was explained in detail.

Pastors in Court Explain What Flag Should Stand For

Hardly Think It Fully Represents Liberty and Equality

Testify for White

John Haynes Holmes and Dr. Grant Defend Revolutionary Preacher

The Rev. John Haynes Holmes, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, and the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, testified yesterday to the good reputation of Bouck White, pastor of the Church of the Social Revolution, on trial in General Sessions for burning an American flag.

Dr. Grant, had Judge McIntyre allowed, would have testified that, in his opinion, world-wide social conditions at the time White hit upon the burning ceremony, were such as to purge White of any suspicion of contempt for the flag.

Under cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Burke, Dr. Grant said he had no prejudice against the American flag.

"Do you believe it stands for liberty, justice and equality?" asked Mr. Burke. "I believe it is supposed to," replied Dr. Grant.

"Well, do you believe it does?"

"Not as much as I wish it might," answered the witness.

Argues Stubbornly

White, acting as his own counsel, argued stubbornly with Judge McIntyre to get before the jury Dr. Grant's conception of the burning of the flag of the nation in the melting pot.

"Here is a man for many years pastor of a church on Fifth Avenue, a church where it might naturally be supposed the capitalists were in control"—he was saying when interrupted by the court.

"It wouldn't make any difference if he came from First Avenue," said Judge McIntyre. "You could have gone up to 'Hell's Kitchen,' as they call it, and if you had brought a clergyman with the word of God in his mouth he would have as much standing in this case as a man of God from Fifth Avenue."

Mr. Holmes testified that on one occasion he preached to the members of White's church when their pastor was in prison.

White asked him if he were in the habit of addressing congregations in the homes of the poor, he said, yes. Mr. Burke objected strenuously.

"You may answer," said Judge McIntyre, with the suspicion of a twinkle in his eye. "I would like to know just how many churches there are in New York where the pastor is in prison."

Mr. Holmes agreed with Dr. Grant that the American flag did not stand for as much liberty, justice and equality as he thought it should.

Would Not Enlist

"Would you enlist if any foreign power declared war on this country?" asked the prosecutor.

"I would not," the witness replied. Earlier Judge McIntyre had asked White and Bernard Raymond, counsel for the other ten co-defendants on trial, directing them to stop wasting time.

"You have been nine days now introducing 'logic' and 'isms.' Please get down to the issues in this case," said the court. "If President Wilson himself should see fit to desecrate the American flag by the meaning of the word 'liberty,' as he has done, would you mind churches there are in New York where the pastor is in prison?"

Mr. Holmes agreed with Dr. Grant that the American flag did not stand for as much liberty, justice and equality as he thought it should.

Judge William J. Wallace

Judge William J. Wallace, associated with the law firm of Barry, Wainwright, Thacher & Symmers, died on Sunday at Jacksonville, Fla. He was born in Syracuse, N.Y., on April 14, 1837, and was graduated from Hamilton College. He received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Hamilton College and from Syracuse University.

In 1872 he was elected Mayor of Syracuse. The following year he was appointed judge of the United States District Court, and served until 1882. In that year he was made a circuit judge. On the creation of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in 1891 he became presiding judge in the 2d Circuit, continuing in this position until his retirement.

He was married in 1878 in New York to Alice Hayward Wheelwright. He was a member of Alpha Delta Phi and of the following clubs: Metropolitan Union League, New York Yacht, of New York; Century, of Syracuse, and the Port Orange, of Albany.

Falk Younger Dies On Train from Border

Veteran Y. M. H. A. Leader Was Ill from Overwork

Falk Younger, field secretary of the national council of Young Men's Hebrew Association, died yesterday on a train near Kansas City, while returning to New York from Douglas, Ariz., where he had made his headquarters while establishing branches of the association far troops on the border. He was forty-six years old.

Word of Mr. Younger's death was received by Jacob H. Schiff and Felix M. Warburg. On Thursday last he wired L. Edwin Goldwasser, director of the Federation for the Support of Hebrew Charities, that he was ill from overwork, and was advised to go to Southern California for a month's rest. Instead, he started home.

For twenty-four years Mr. Younger was superintendent of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, at Lexington Avenue and Ninety-second Street, an institution which he virtually established. Six years ago he became the head of the Emmanuel Brotherhood House, on East Sixth Street, and placed it under the management of the Young Men's Hebrew Association.

Mr. Younger's body will be brought to this city Wednesday. Funeral services probably will be held at the West End Synagogue, Wednesday evening or Thursday morning, although members of the Young Men's Hebrew Association are anxious to have the services in their building.
